Best Forex Forums Review

Forums are widespread these days and they are very helpful in collaborating and meeting with like minded people. However forums also add to the already existing noise and makes it harder if not used carefully. In this article we will look at the best Forex forums:

ForexFactory.com:

This is by far the best forum when it comes to Forex. There are lot of active members and plenty of free systems to get started. The highlight of this forum is their "Trading Systems" section which contains good systems and it is most active section of ForexFactory. If you into Forex this is the forum to join.

FxStreet.com:

Though second in our list this forum has fairly less number of active members. The section to check out is "Fundamental Analysis" which seems to be quite active on this forum. All in all you can do without this forum.

Babypips.com:

Babypips is Mecca for Forex beginners. They have excellent tutorials under "School" section. In the forums you can meet a lot of newbies, so if you are one of them then this is the place to start. all.

Forex-TSD.com:

This forum has the large number of members focused primarily on programming and creating Forex Expert Advisors. There is also a Elite member section which provide access to EAs tracked and maintained by the Host. If you are looking for some help in creating an Expert Advisor then you can try this forum. Also visit <http://www.mql4.com> if you only want MetaTrader Expert Advisor.

So these were the top four forums I think are worth joining. There are many other forums and you may also want to check them out. Below is the list of such forums sorted by Alexa ranking:
